

Birmingham City Council

The Mayor, Pune

Councillor Paulette
Hamilton, Birmingham

The Deputy Mayor,
Pune

Dr Adrian Phillips,
Birmingham

"This SMART nutrition program will help us in creating a good atmosphere among these adolescent girls."

"The SMART city mission itself has an aim of people's participation in every part of society."

"In today's program we can find out some type of solutions that we can observe in both cities."

"For this project to grow and work, we all have to work together, both the partners in Pune and us in the UK. I'd like to see partners come together with a common vision."

"Let us work together, let us be big, let us be absolutely wanting to make a change, let us think out of the box, we can move mountains to ensure that the future life chances of our citizens are increased, let us make a difference."

"With this collaboration, a platform will be created, for inter-city knowledge exchange and to share the experience of nutrition."

"By working together on these challenges, which take different forms in both cities, both PMC and BMH city council will be able to leverage their collective skill and assets, and achieve a greater impact than by tackling the problem alone."

"We've forgotten about food, and how important it is, and actually how critical it is in our lives."

"If nothing else, SMART cities is a way to start putting food back on the agenda"

"In the SMART city, we can start to reframe the question, and to understand how we use all these threats as opportunities"

Additional Municipal Commissioner, Pune

"We are trying to learn from each others experiences and ideas and we want to create a platform for enableable joint learning, experience sharing and piloting together of specific initiatives."

Shireen Vakil, Tata
Trusts

"This is a very interesting and exciting partnership, one that is very new and innovative."

"SMART cities is not just about infrastructure, it's really about people and human beings, and everything else supports that and enables and fosters growth and development which must include issues such as nutrition and health."
